

INSTITUTE NOTES

Over 150 teachers in the Pocahontas County Institute, the majority of them having already attended summer school this year, is not this sufficient evidence that the "new teacher" is on the job?

The Institute of this year furnished new features of especial significance. Physical education is being stressed. Mr. Melville Stewart, of the State Department, having charge. Daily the high school ball field has been dotted with brightly colored specks bobbing up and down. This is the Institute "getting up." Mr. Stewart's work closed on Thursday morning with a county rally, each of the districts competing for the brightest banner, the loudest yell, and the most patriotic song.

The activity of the Institute has not been entirely physical; the mental diet has been heavy. A unique feature was presented on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday by Miss Fishbaugh who gave a series of psychological lectures on the treatment of different types of school children. Miss Fishbaugh has practically completed studies for a doctor's degree in education from Johns Hopkins University and will hold an associate professorship in Wesleyan during the coming year.

Mr. Lively of Fairmont, N. C., has been our chief instructor. Besides general lectures on the purpose and meaning of education in relation to both society and the individual, he has contributed to the Institute by conducting open discussions each day upon local school topics.

The music, under the able direction of Mr. Shroust, has helped to preserve the spirit and unity of the Institute.

On Wednesday afternoon, Superintendent Ford made an unexpected and welcome visit to the teachers.

He spoke typically to the institute, stressing in his talk the great work of the State Educational Association.

BATTLE OF DROOP MT.

Dear Editor—Aren't the Battle of Droop Mountain, I probably know more than any other one now living. Averil stayed all night the night before at the home of my uncle, Rev. M. D. Dunlap. He told my uncle he was going to fight the battle next day. My uncle said no more perfect gentleman than Averil ever lived.

The late John Irvine, of Deerfield, was with the brass gun which was buried. He was at my house after the war, and I think from what he said the gun was on the Wm. McCoy place. After it had been fired a while, the wheels were shot off, and the gun was buried and a chestnut tree was rolled over the place.

Now for the Federal side. The two thousand men, who made the flank movement, kept the top of the mountain and formed a line at the old rail fence, and fired into the Confederates when they came up to attack.

Col. Edgar was stationed on the Locust Creek with his battalion. I think, about 600 men.

I was well acquainted with Dr. Hartshorne, a nephew and aid of Col. Ewing.

Col. Ewing located his battery on the ridge on the Lockridge place on the ridge just east of the first cut in the road. While placing the guns and afterward a small Confederate gun, located on the mountain, annoyed them greatly. It killed nearly all their horses; Hartshorne's amongst others.

Col. Ewing and Hartshorne were standing with their backs against the bank of the cut. A lieutenant was standing in the road in front of them talking, when a shot from the little gun took off the lieutenant's head. You will understand the whole thing if you go the place and look.

When the Confederate lines broke, Hartshorne took his saddle and bridle and caught a sorrel mare belonging to F. A. Renick. He pushed on with the advance of the soldiers. As they went up the mountain, they captured a Confederate captain with ten or twelve men. The captain had a gun in his hand fighting as a common soldier. He reproached them for cowardice for sneaking up behind him while he was shooting at those in front.

It would seem that they ought to have captured the whole Confederate force, but Hartshorne was in the advance guard. The Confederate rear guard would fire into them at every turn then gallup out of sight, while they advanced cautiously around the turn. If you cross the mountain you will easily see how it was. As last they came to the open country in Benicks Valley. Here they saw the rear guard. A single man had saved the army. The Yankees spread out, ran fashion, and called on him to surrender. He fired on them, killing a horse, and turned and fled. The whole advance guard fired on him and killed him. When they came up to him they searched him for papers, but found none. The officer of the advance guard ordered a soldier to dismount and cover the dead with his blanket. He ordered his men to uncover. As the soldier laid the blanket over the dead, the officer said, "here lies a Soldier." Hartshorne notified the people at the brick house, where the body was that Greenbrier should find out his name and erect a monument to his memory.

Hartshorne said that Averil was sent on his famous raid not to destroy the Confederate grain, but to destroy Averil. But he came back and had to be gotten rid of some other way.

On his return, I think from what Hartshorne said, that Averil must have come up Jacksons River and come down Meadow Creek to Antchons Creek. Why did not his guide take him up North Fork to Beaver Creek? Was his guide guilty of treachery or did he not know the country as well as I do?

When they came to the river it was full of water and the water full of floating ice. Averil ordered the artillery in first. The poor exhausted leaders were beaten down by the current. Averil ordered a trooper to go in and support them. The trooper hesitated. Averil was enraged. He drew his pistol and fired at the trooper who instantly obeyed, as every one else did.

Hartshorne did not think the horses would get through. He got off his mount and crossed on a caisson.

Again Averil stopped with my uncle and talked most interestingly and intelligently on questions of Theology on which they perfectly agreed.

If Averil had had the opportunity he would no doubt have been the Stonewall Jackson of the North.

I could tell many more things, but I have not time at present. Some day may be.

Those of the present generation care nothing for these things. They are all crazy trying to get away from themselves and the Hell burning within them. Where will it all end? They have nothing which can satisfy them.

The old custom of evening prayer and Puritan observance of the Sabbath gave to life a calm and satisfaction nothing else has ever been able to replace.

Respectfully, etc.

Mrs. Julia Ann Kinnison, wife of Thos. F. Kinnison, died at her home at Hillsboro, September 5, 1923, aged 86 years. Burial at the Oak Grove graveyard on Thursday, the services conducted by Rev. W. C. Early and Rev. J. C. Johnson.

Mrs. Kinnison was raised in Greenbrier county. Her maiden name was Nanna and she was of English ancestry. She survived by her husband and their two children, Collier W. Kinnison and Mrs. J. P. Beard. For fifty or more years she had been a professional Christian, a member of the Methodist church.

DR. FLOW AT HILLSBORO

Dr. J. E. Flow, Evangelist for Greenbrier Presbytery, is conducting a series of special services at Oak Grove church, Hillsboro. Dr. Flow is a preacher of remarkable power. For years he was pastor of large churches, but about a year ago he gave up his pastorate to devote his time to the work of an evangelist. Much of that time has been devoted to special services in Pocahontas county, and wonderful results have attended his preaching.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union met in regular session, September 5th, at the home of Mrs. Forrest Malcomb, with a good attendance. After devotional, which was conducted by the president, business was in order. Mrs. Fred Gehauf was elected delegate to the State Convention, which is to be held in Morgantown, October 9, 10, 11. Mrs. W. A. Eskridge, first alternate and Mrs. Guy Faulkner, second alternate. Officers were also elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, Mrs. S. J. Rexrode, vice-president, Mrs. H. H. Orr, recording secretary, Mrs. T. J. Mason; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. C. May; treasurer, Mrs. W. H. Hiner. Meeting was closed with benediction, after which delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

H. Lee White was over at his old home in Crabbottom last week. On his return he was accompanied by Mrs. George Swecker and son Paul, who were guests in the White home for a few days. Mr. White went a fishing over in the South Branch. He brought us an eel skin which is a considerable curiosity to most people who live on the western waters.

Squire J. H. Shrader, of Huntersville, was in Marlinton on Monday on his way to Hillsboro. He gave us a pointer in fitting lambs for market. He runs his sheep in the woods, and a month or so before the lambs are to go away he brings them in to his grass fields and feeds them on pumpkins. The lambs fatten surprisingly fast.

Next Sunday September 16, there will be all day services and dinner on the ground at Brushy Flat school house, three miles above the Fair Grounds. Everybody cordially invited.

A three year old child of E. B. Jordan, colored, fell last week and injured an eye so badly that the eye ball will have to be removed.

SCHOOL TIME IS HERE

The time is again rapidly approaching when the schools will be opening to receive the youths of the state. We are thereby reminded that the school is a clearinghouse for the spread of infectious and contagious diseases. There are nearly 500,000 children of school age in this state. That are early in September to assemble in the various schools. Among this number there are many who are disease carriers. If West Virginia is to come in under the wire a safe winner in the suppression of infectious and contagious diseases, we must look more closely after the protection of the children; who must spend five days a week in the school room.

By making education compulsory, we have automatically assumed the responsibility of keeping the school safe. It is therefore, of far-reaching importance that all children be given a careful examination before entering or as they are about to enter school to determine whether or not they are disease carriers or coming from homes where a contagious or infectious disease exists. In the school the spreading of infection is a serious problem because it is more frequently where that infection is transferred between children of widely separated households. Before the opening of school, I would suggest that a sample of the water supply be sent to the State Laboratory for analysis; where water is absolutely known to be safe, this is not necessary. This precaution may prevent an epidemic of typhoid fever, dysentery, and other water borne diseases. This precaution will save lives.

Teachers, parents and children should know that whenever many children gather together, the danger from measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough, diphtheria, etc., is the greatest in this season.

It is very important for mothers and fathers to co-operate with the local health officer and family physician in trying to discover and isolate these childhood diseases. It is particularly important to do this in any family where some child is started off to school, then the school, when it opens, will not become a medium of spreading the epidemic of some contagious disease thru the community.

Diphtheria may be carried by a healthy child to its schoolmates if a younger brother or sister has had this disease or if it is still in the home. If you have any suspicion that you may have had a childhood disease in your family during the summer vacation, be sure to consult your family physician or the local health officer before sending or accepting children in your school.

REMINISCENCES

ANNA L. PRICE

It was in Mecklenburg county, Virginia, and long ago as men count time, that a lovely young Christian girl lay dying. She had all that this world valued to bind her to earth, but was calmly, even happily awaiting death. The secret of this was her sincere and ardent faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Her name—well, that hardly matters, doubtless all her nearest kindred have departed. It was a pleasant name, and very familiar to me; viz. Alice Baskerville. Being asked concerning her evident and more than calm composure, she said, "I know not if I ought to express my holy delight; but I see one standing near me who has 'Comfort' written on his breast." The young person died. It was Saturday, June 19, 1852. On the next day, June 20, 1853, I was permitted to join the Church of our Lord Jesus Christ, far from that calm death scene, in the fullness of health, aged fifteen years, in the City of Brooklyn, New York, then my home. I count that day the happiest of my life. It seems an age to most of my readers—to me as yesterday. The Church of Christ, blessed here, and to be perfected and glorified in Heaven. Dear Church of God! hasten to full triumph, Lord of Hosts. Not even Death can separate the soul from the love of Christ. God hath a book of remembrance, be our names and all holy remembrances in that holy book! God reads that book and if we speak lovingly of Him He puts it down. O! remember.

FROM PENNSYLVANIA

Dear Editor:
It has been years since I last wrote your valuable paper, but in all these years we have been constant readers of everything that has appeared in print even every "ad" and there seems to be quite a lot of farms for sale at all times, tending to show that the young generation of the old original inhabitants are locating at other points of the compass.

We have been here three years this past July and so far we have enjoyed farm life in this country of promise to the people of W. Va.; who have been accustomed to farming over those hills, and have no market for their dairy products only in raising stock cattle or beef cattle. Here we seldom ever see any beef cattle, all are dairy herds, and what calves are not kept for dairy cows are sold for veal. We have seven Jersey cows, two horses, a bunch of 3 C. Leghorn chickens, which we manage to keep on a twenty two acre farm, but let me say this we could never do this if it was not for our silo and I would not keep a cow unless I had a silo of some kind, of course we aim to produce enough barn fertilizer or manure to keep yearly covering up our ground and here it produce more and more each year. This is a land of hustle and hurry, in fact if one farms at any place you must hustle.

We are twelve or fifteen miles from the Suttons, Kerns, Nottinghams etc. The Suttons spent a day with us some time ago, all are looking well they had with them, W. A. Arbogast who was looking for a farm and I suppose he and his brother Frank must have located farms in near Marlinton or Jamestown, Pa. as I notice that both of them have their farms for sale. Most all of the West Virginians are locating in near West Virginia, but some way or other we prefer this section of Crawford County, near Dicksonburg and Harmanburg, only five miles to Conneaut Lake Park on Conneaut Lake a great summer resort, we are only nine miles west from Meadville our county seat, only 2 1/2 miles from trolley line and 2 1/4 miles from Bessemer railroad, near stores, churches and schools, and they are now erecting a Dicksonburg a $250000 dairy plant which will boost the dairy business as we are now shipping milk to Pittsburgh; a milk express car leaves Dicksonburg each morning for Pittsburgh. Any one desiring to settle in this country and want to engage in the dairy business should write me as I know of several farms near here, from 50 to 125 acre farms that can be bought reasonable and on good terms, the owners of some of them have lost their wives or others their children have gone to town and some are old and not able to work. No hills, here, the lot far from here there are some. This is rolling land and some of it very productive.

I noticed in your paper that the old Pocahontas County Fair is in full swing this week, and trust that you may record crowd and the best exhibit ever. We would like very much to have been there on Home Coming Day. Our county fair is next week at Conneaut Lake Park, which promises to be a great time. Come up Mr. Editor and take in the Fair and have a swim in the Lake.

We have had a very dry summer so far, but on yesterday and to day we have had copious showers which has revived vegetation and we hope that every few days we may have rain. So many people have had to haul water from a distance; hay was a light crop, from 20 up to 40 bu. per acre.

Mr. Editor I expect this is enough for this time and some future date hope to write again. Kindest regards to all Pocahontas friends and relatives.
Adieu
W. E. Arbogast
